said: "That is just like the star that Black Beauty had, he is much the same height, too; I wonder where he is now."

A little further on, he came to the place in my neck where I was blood, and where a little knot was left in the skin. He almost started, and began to look at me over carefully, talking to himself. "White star in the forehead, one white foot on the off side, this little knot just in that place." Then, looking at the middle of my back—"and, as I am alive, there is that little patch of white hair that John used to call 'Beauty's forepenny bit.' It must be Black Beauty! Why, Beauty! Beauty! do you know me? Little Joe Green?" And he began patting and patting me as if he was quite overjoyed.

I could not say that I remembered him, but I put my nose up to him and tried to say that we were friends. I never saw a man so pleased.

"Give you a fair trial! I should think so, indeed! I wonder who the master was that broke your knees, my old Beauty! You must have been badly served out some here; well, well, it won't be my fault if you don't have good times now. I wish John Manly was here to see you."

In the afternoon I was put into a low Park chair, and brought to the door. Miss Ellen was going to try me, and Green went with her. I soon found that she was a good driver and she seemed pleased with my name. I heard Joe telling her about me, and that he was sure I was Squire Gordon's old "Black Beauty."

When we returned, the other sisters came out to hear how I had behaved myself. She told them what she had just heard, and said: "I shall certainly write to Mrs. Gordon, and tell her that her favorite horse has come to us. How pleased she will be!"

After this I was driven every day for a week or so, and as I appeared
